This inspiring event features renowned keynote speaker, Professor Helen Gleeson (University of Leeds), who will share her insights on opening doors for women and those with non-traditional backgrounds, having herself overcome many barriers along her academic path. Other speakers will discuss initiatives and opportunities for promoting diversity in science.

In the afternoon, a diversity of esteemed scientists will highlight their work and discuss their career trajectories, which hopes to provide practical insights and inspiration to all those navigating their careers in science, especially for women and underrepresented groups.

The symposium will include a lunch with mixer, offering an excellent opportunity for attendees to connect with peers, mentors, and leaders in the field over food and beverages. This event is in English.
